My dear Sir:

I have your letter of December 6th asking for an article for publication dealing with a set subject. It is a pretty large question that you are asking me to answer and a difficult one, because the experience of Canada is so much narrower and shorter than that of the United States. I should like to think over the matter, because for the next fortnight I am so loaded with work and engagements that I could not find time to think about it. In any case I could not let you have it before the first of January. Can you wait for a definite answer from me until the Christmas holidays?

Yours sincerely,

President.
